

EDITOR AND MRS. J. H. NEWTON CELEBRATE THEIR GOLDEN WEDDING

Receiving Their Friends
at North Fifth Street Home

BY KEEPING OPEN HOUSE

No Invitations Issued in City But Friends Received General Invitation Through Press.

Fifty years of wedded happiness on earth is an experience as blissful as it is rare. Of the thousands and millions of couples who pledge their marital vows at the marriage altar, very, very few, are permitted to have such an experience.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Newton may be classed among the fortunate few, and today they are celebrating their golden wedding. Mr. and Mrs. Newton have lived in Newark for nearly thirty years, and have been identified with the growth and prosperity of Newark through all these years, and today their handsome home on North Fifth street has been crowded with the friends who came to congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Newton, who have passed through the joys and sorrows of life's pathway together for fifty years, and who are still hale and hearty, and who entered into the social festivities incident to the occasion with the vim of the youngest of their friends. This genial, happy couple Wednesday threw wide open the doors of their hospitable home, and it has been a veritable mecca for their friends, both in and out of the city.

Joseph H. Newton was born January 10, 1836, in Smithfield, Jefferson county, his parents being George F. and Eliza Gray Newton. When two years old his father removed to Holmes county, where the son acquired a common school and academic education. At the age of 18 years he left the student's desk for the printer's case. He learned the printing trade in the office of the Holmes County Farmer, of which his father at that time was one owner and proprietor. When twenty years of age he became the editor of the paper.

On December 16, 1858, Mr. Newton and Miss Anna M. Sproal went from Millersburg to Mansfield, where they were married. They returned home two days later, that being the extent of their wedding trip. At this time Mr. Newton had an intimate personal acquaintance with Charles F. Brown, city editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, who afterwards was the famous humorist, Artemus Ward. Mr. Brown indulged in some of his proverbial, unique humor in writing up Mr. Newton's wedding for the Plain Dealer, the heading of his article being, "Gone and Done It." When Mr. Brown, as Artemus Ward, afterwards achieved world wide fame as a humorous lecturer, his wedding notice was always a pleasant memory to Mr. and Mrs. Newton.

In 1859 Mr. Newton sold his interest in the Holmes County Farmer to Judge J. A. Estell. The following year he was appointed Deputy County Auditor, his father at that time being Auditor. Later he was elected County Auditor.

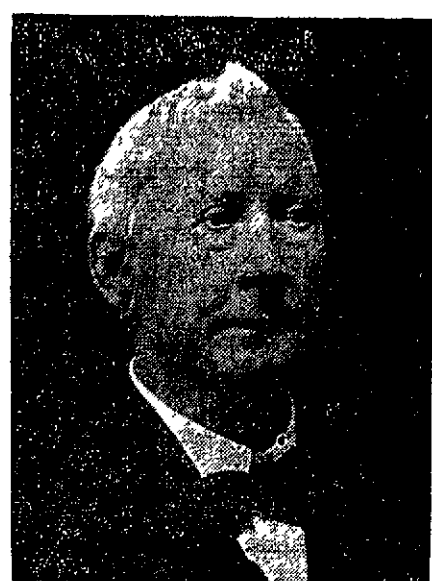

It was in March, 1880, that Mr. Newton became editor of the Newark Advocate, and during his continuous connection with this paper for nearly 29 years, he has become well known throughout the State personally as well as prominent as an editor.

Mr. Newton, aside from his editorial work, has always been a great admirer of Isaac Walton, and is an enthusiastic angler. His fondness for this sport and his knowledge of fish culture received recognition from Governor James E. Campbell, who in March of 1890, appointed him a member of the State Board of Fish and Game Commissioners. He served four years on this board and was then compelled to resign on account of numerous other duties, which made it impossible for him to give the position proper attention.

In July, 1893, Mr. Newton became postmaster of Newark and served until April, 1898, some nine months after the expiration of his term. He served on the State and Game Commission from 1890 to 1893, and was a trustee of the Massillon Hospital board for four years under the administration of Governor Nash.

For the past five years he has been President of the Ohio Democratic Editorial Association.

Mr. Newton is known by nearly

MR. AND MRS. J. H. NEWTON.

every one in Newark, and though she would forbid the writer to say so, hers are the quiet and gentle virtues which render others happy, more than the brilliant and heroic deeds which fill the world with admiration.

The sunshine and clouds which go to make up one's earthly stay have mingled in the lives of Mr. and Mrs. Newton, but the loyalty and constancy which characterized their earlier days never weakened, and the young people of fifty years ago are today as blithe and merry as on the autumn day half a century since, when they surrendered to Cupid's wiles.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton are the parents of one daughter, Mrs. Lida H. Pierson, widow of the late Andrew H. Pierson, who for many years was the successful manager of the Advocate.

The Newton residence was arranged with yellow and white chrysanthemums, and in the parlor where Mr. and Mrs. Newton greeted their guests, was a background of palms and evergreen, while the chandeliers were festooned with fir branches and cones, and the lights were shaded with yellow.

A pretty feature of the arrangement was the showing of a very old lamp, being the first coal oil lamp ever in Millersburg, and an exquisite guest's book, being bound in gray sheep skin with the embossed dates, 1858-1908, and a solid gold ring, engraved with the dates, catching the gray ribbons. The book contains a copy of the invitation issued only to the out of the city friends, and the portraits of the bride and groom of fifty years. In view was a picture of the couple just before they were married.

Mrs. Newton was gowned in her wedding dress, as was Mrs. S. C. Priest, and just this feature was needed to complete an event of the most happy arrangement.

A reception was served the numerous callers during the noon and evening, and after the guests had been served a tiny bowl of gold with the characteristic dates was pinned on them. Assisting during the afternoon and evening were Mrs. S. C. Priest, Mrs. W. W. Prout, Mrs. T. M. Edmiston, Mrs. Dr. Morse, Mrs. C. H. Spencer, Miss McKinney, Miss Mary Miller, Misses Frances and Anna Priest. At noon a family dinner was served, the centerpiece for the table being an immense bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. The only guests aside from the family were Rev. and Mrs. T. A. Cosgrove.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton received a large number of very handsome remembrances, among them being a beautiful chair from the Elks, and the employees of the Advocate Printing company presented them with a cut glass wine service with letter "N" cut in the glasses and the dates of the decanter.

The following are guests at the home for the occasion, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Newton and Mr. Daniel Duer of Millersburg. Mr. and Mrs. Z. T. Duer of Killbuck. Mrs. Charles Schenbley of Condit, and Mrs. Charles Green of Centerburg.

No invitations to the golden wedding celebration were sent to Newark friends, but a general invitation was extended through the paper to all of their friends and Mr. and Mrs. Newton are keeping open house this afternoon and evening in honor of their 50th wedding anniversary.

ROBBERS

ATTEMPT TO ENTER GREENWICH BANK AND ONE OF THEM IS KILLED.

Posse Scouring Country for Members of Band Who Escaped—Town Marshal Shot.

Greenwich, O., Dec. 16.—One man was killed and Marshall Clyde Wood was probably fatally wounded early this morning in a gun fight between the marshal and five men, thought to have attempted to enter the First National and Farmers' banks here. Two hundred men are scouring the country in search of the four men who escaped. The men stole a rig from Geo. Cupit, a farmer near Greenwich. Following the attempt to enter the two banks Tuesday night, Marshal Wood discovered a man this morning near the grain elevator. Four other men soon appeared and ordered Wood to throw up his hands. Wood shot the first man through the heart. At the same time the men fired and the marshal was shot through the lungs and may die.

The men attacked the officer as he lay on the ground. Mrs. Clarence Stout, night operator in the telephone exchange, heard the shot, gave the alarm and a posse was formed. Marshal Wood was taken to Galion, and it is thought his injuries will prove fatal. The dead man has not been identified, being a large man, about 55 years of age.

HAINS TRIAL

NOW UNDER WAY AND PROSECUTOR ADDRESSES JURY FOR THE STATE.

Charge Made That Witness Have Been Tampered With—Mrs. Annis in Court.

Flushing, Dec. 16.—With the jury selected the trial proper of T. J. Hains started today. Assistant Prosecutor White opened the day's proceeding, with an address for the prosecution. Charges have been made that witnesses have been tampered with. District Attorney Darrin says that if the charges are continued he will take them before the grand jury after the case is closed. Early indications point to the case being bitterly fought on both sides. Mr. Hains arrived in court early. Mrs. William Annis was also there. The prosecution counts greatly on her story, in which she charges that the intimacy between Mr. Annis and Mrs. Hains is false. She says she trusted her husband.

In the opening address White made a resume of the entire case telling of incidents of the shooting. He was interrupted frequently by the attorneys for the defense but was allowed to proceed by the court. Attorney McIntyre filed a motion asking dismissal of all indictments, which was ruled against.

Edward Andrews, a member of the yacht club where the shooting occurred, was called to the stand. He said he was standing on the dock when he was attracted by a shot. He saw Captain Hains shooting Annis. He started toward Captain Hains, but Thornton turned a gun on him and said: "Stand back, I'm running this." When the firing ceased Andrews reached in the water and dragged Annis out. He said the Hains brothers stood to one side. One was smoking a pipe and the other a cigarette.

It was announced that the father of Juror Jardine was dead. The trial may be postponed until after the funeral. The judge will make his decision this afternoon.

BURTON MAY POLL STATE FOR SENATE

Will Sound Republican Sentiment to Get Expression

IS A GREAT FAVORITE

Congressman Announces That He Will Begin Strenuous Campaign for Senatorial Toga.

Columbus, Dec. 16.—Theodore Burton has sprung a new plan to win the senatorship. He will arrive here tomorrow, open headquarters at the Neil, and begin a poll of the Ohio Republicans. This is the ambitious project which the Cleveland congressman announced at Cleveland on his arrival home from Washington yesterday.

Presumably this state poll will not include every one of the 600,000 Republican voters of Ohio, for the bill for postage would be of alarming size. Such a poll would be practically a state primary. It is expected the Cleveland candidate will try to get an expression of their senatorial preferences from only the leading Republicans of each county. This plan was adopted by H. A. Cobb, member-elect from Trumbull county. He sent out slips to 100 of the more influential Republicans of the county, with the assertion, result that a majority favored Burton, with James Rudolph Garfield as second choice. It is quite likely that Burton has simply adopted Cobb's plan of sounding party sentiment.

Burton will ask the Republican members of the legislature to make this poll in their several counties for him. If any of them decline, he will ask citizens to do the polling. It is asserted that half a dozen counties already have been polled in this way, and that these polls show Burton to be the favorite.

The following special dispatch was received from Cleveland last night:

Within a few minutes after his arrival here today, Theodore Burton announced that he would begin a strenuous campaign for the senatorial toga. Part of his program announced tonight is to open headquarters in Columbus at once, and from there poll the voters of the state.

Burton held a long conference with Secretary A. N. Rodway of the Republican county committee, J. J. Rowe of the state committee, and other workers who have been out in the state for him. Burton said he would go to Columbus to open headquarters Thursday. "I do not care to go into details," said he, "but this contest will be carried on with all the vigor that can be put into it. The people of Ohio will hear from me from this time forward."

Half a dozen counties polled show that the people want Burton for senator. If the legislators will not conduct the polls, citizens will be asked to take hold.

Arthur I. Vorys, State Chairman Williams, State Auditor Guilbert and Secretary of State Thompson were in New York yesterday as guests at the Taft banquet of the Ohio Society of New York, so it was impossible to ascertain at the Taft managers thought of Burton's plan of campaign. It is not impossible, though, that they may chime in with it, as they have confidence in the popularity of Chas. P. Taft.

CITY UNDER MARTIAL LAW

Willemsted, Dec. 15.—News of the capture of a second Venezuela vessel caused a violent outbreak when it reached Caracas, the capital. The riot has been subdued and the city is now under martial law.

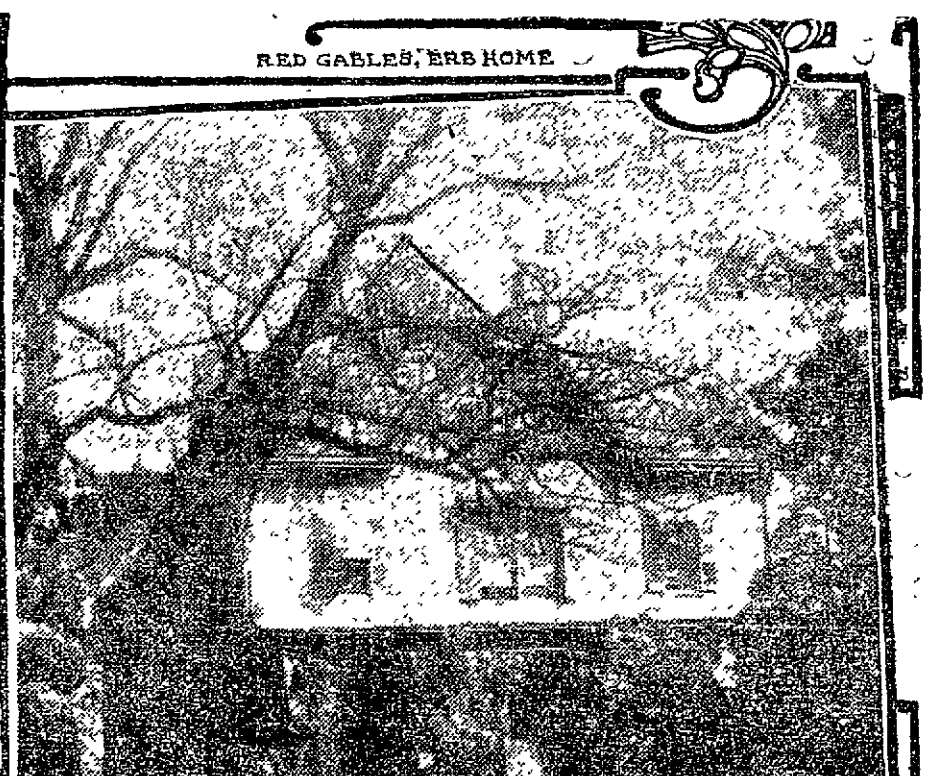

Indications for the overthrow of Castro are assured. Monday night people paraded the streets, crying "Down with the dictator," and stoned houses of friends of the president and burned pictures and statues of him. There is no feeling against Holland, but praise for the Dutch for making the start that will probably end in a new government in Venezuela.

SCENE OF SENSATIONAL ERB TRAGEDY; SISTERS HELD FOR MYSTERIOUS CRIME

MRS. J. CLAYTON ERB

MRS. BEISEL

Media, Pa., Dec. 16.—Mrs. Florence Erb and Mrs. Catherine Beisel, her sister, have been jointly indicted at Media, Pa. in connection with the killing of Captain Clayton Erb, Mrs. Erb's husband, which occurred at Red Gables, the country home of the Erbs, on October 6. The hearing is set for December 21.

Captain Erb was a well known politician and member of the Pennsylvania national guard. His widow is a beautiful young woman, fond of society and a daring horsewoman.

Erb was shot after a bitter quarrel in his house, and much mystery surrounded the case. Mrs. Beisel was accused of the actual shooting and at once sent to jail. Mrs. Erb obtained bail, but will be arraigned with her sister under the joint indictment charging manslaughter.

Look into Modern Business Methods

See what other concerns are doing.

Don't you want to get the benefit of the practical time and money-saving ideas that other progressive business houses are adopting to solve modern business problems?

Don't you want to learn what somebody else is doing to save time or money in his business, that is being wasted in YOUR business? Don't you want to see what they are doing to safeguard their accounts and books of record against little errors that seem almost unavoidable?

Here is a book, a splendid business book, compiled by the Business Systems Department of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company—first published less than two months ago, and already in its 25th thousand. Hundreds of progressive business men have thanked us heartily for a copy, and praised it in no measured terms. Why? Because it points the way directly to better business methods readily applicable to almost any business.

This book is significantly entitled—

"A Better Day's Work"

because it explains ways of doing the day's work in less time, with less work and worry, with unflinching accuracy.

"A Better Day's Work" is a book of 160 pages, well printed, profusely illustrated, and bound in strong limp covers. "It is a business man's text book," says one manufacturer who received a copy, "and right to the point."

A man in Lewiston, Idaho, says: "It is entitled to as good a shelf as any in my library: A work of art."

We want you to have a copy of "A Better Day's Work," however, not as an adornment for your book shelves, but for reference on top of the desk in your counting room, store or factory.

We want you to get the benefit of the intrinsic value that is in this book, and we freely offer to send you a copy, all charges prepaid, on the conditions mentioned in the coupon at the bottom of this advertisement.

Why You Need This Book
It contains over two-score specific business systems, the cream of the modern methods devised during recent years by high-grade business men and accountants, tried out and stamped O. K. by leading business concerns.

Each of these systems presents a better, or quicker, or more accurate, way of doing some one of the things that are part of the regular "day's work" in any ordinary business establishment. A few of these systems are intended especially for certain lines of business, many of them are applicable to any business. Some of them are sure to fill a real need in YOUR business.

That is why we want you to read this book.

For example—The book contains a short and simple, almost automatic, system for taking Daily Proof of Ledger Postings. It presents four simple Trial Balance systems that are a revelation of accuracy and time-saving.

This Book of Modern Business

Compiled from the priceless experience of thousands of Burroughs users and arranged by the Burroughs Department of Business Systems

Is Free—Postpaid

Ten pages of this unusual book are devoted to up-to-date methods of Cost Keeping, describing a most efficient system in use by a representative concern.

Every feature is explained in detail and illustrated with lifelike reproductions of actual forms used by progressive concerns in handling their systems.

Some of the other chapters in the book explain the modern way of handling Monthly Statements with less time, work and opportunity for error; how to make daily, weekly or monthly Recapitulation of Sales in a retail or wholesale business; shorter and better way of handling incoming remittances (Cash Received system); making up Payroll with speed and insurance of accuracy; making out Invoices by machine; Checking, Cross-checking and proving work of all kinds.

There are several pages of miscellaneous bookkeepers' "stunts," and short-cuts, such as mechanical methods of Multiplication, Subtraction, Division, etc.

Do you wonder that we call this a business man's text book?

In addition to its intensely practical value, "A Better Day's Work" has its lighter side and will be keenly enjoyed by every business man. It is especially dedicated to "The Man at the Desk," with a clever drawing of that overworked individual to illustrate Wallace Irwin's famous poem.

The book is introduced with a quaintly written and finely illustrated history of the development of accounting and office practice from the earliest times. The gradual evolution of our present bookkeeping methods and the age-long efforts to produce a mechanical aid to the human brain in handling figures are entertainingly portrayed, and with strict historical accuracy—something every "man at the desk" will wish to preserve.

Of course a book involving such an expenditure of time, money, talent and careful research as this, has an advertising purpose.

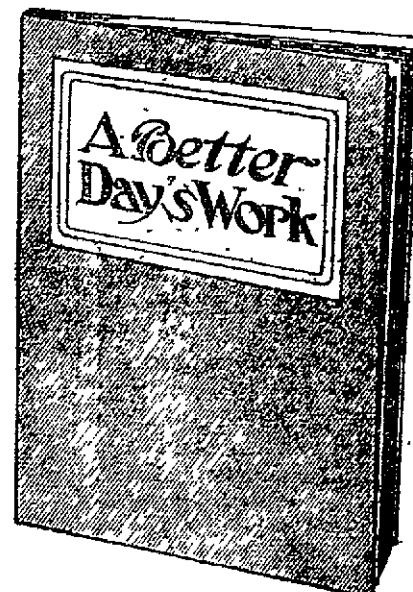

It is not in any sense a catalogue.

It does not ask you to buy anything.

It merely shows you some of the many ways in which 70,000 business men—small as well as large—save money by modern systems adapted to the wonderful Burroughs Adding and Listing (Bookkeeping) Machine.

Many of the systems shown in the book will save money for you without a Burroughs. If any system saves money without a Burroughs, it will save at least twice as much when there is a Burroughs to handle the details and insure accuracy.

But let the book tell its own story. Get the book. Read the coupon below. Then take advantage of it to-day.

The coupon below explains how any business man may have a copy of this valuable business book without charge. Read the coupon.

MY UNCLE FROM INDIA.

This play adapted from the German by Harold Sander, is a capital comedy, which moves briskly through four acts to a most amusing climax. It will be presented at the High School Auditorium Friday evening, Dec. 18.

Mr. Richard Marsland has engaged Robert, a literary milkop just out of the theological seminary as his private secretary.

But Lothair McDonald, enticed by his nephew, Harry Marsland, agrees to masquerade as the secretary and goes down to Marsland's country place with Harry to avoid some bills, due one Gibson, a tailor.

Meantime Lothair's rich uncle from India arrives, meet's the housekeeper, who is quite a character, with whom he has a stormy interview and mistakes Robert for his nephew, resulting in the most absurd complication.

Gibson makes ludicrous attempts to gain a foothold in society, and the uncle from India finally discovers his real nephew. Just what the turns are that lead to this discovery are too devious to relate. Suffice to say that through the medium of spiritualism, Marsland finally loses his secretary, but gains a son-in-law. The play fairly bristles with startling situations and laughable scenes. It is translated from the same source that furnished the famous comedy called "The Private Secretary." Following is the cast:

Richard Marsland—Sherwood Miller. Harry Marsland, (his nephew)—Kenneth Farmer. James McDonald, late of India—

Dudley Miller. Lothair McDonald, (his nephew)—Will Hohl. Robert Squeezedown—Dorwin Palmer. Sydney Gibson, a tailor—Paul Russell. John Marshland—Butler—John Baird. Trip, Knox, Constable—Walter Tritipo. Bath Marsland (Marsland's daughter)—Stella Emery. Eva Webster, (her friend)—Bessie Smith.

Mrs. Dixon, Lothair's Landlady—Annette Besuden. Miss Sarah Smith (fond of mystery)—Selma Bieberbach.

REMEMBER PUBLIC LIBRARY

To the People of Newark:
Although your public library has only been open for three or four months, it has certainly proved itself worthy of your confidence and support. Of 1,500 or more volumes which have been purchased or donated about 1200 at this writing are out; so you can easily see that we need more books to supply the increasing calls and demands that are made on us from day to day. We have a goodly number of periodicals on our table-but more would be heartily welcomed —particularly your subscriptions for the Scientific American, the World of Today, and the World's Work.
Wherefore we hope that in making up your "Christmas Gifts" you will generously remember the wants of the Library which has been established in your midst, and make it the object of your largest and most liberal generosity.

MEDINA COUNTY GIVES DRYS A MAJORITY OF 1188
VOTES.

Seven Saloons Voted Out and All But Five Precincts Give Dry
Majorities.

Medina, Dec. 16—With a majority of 1188 votes, Medina county yesterday went dry, voting out seven saloons, six in Wadsworth and one in Liverpool. Of the 24 precincts in the county, 19 gave dry majorities, and all the villages, including Medina, the county seat, went dry. The dry vote was 3314, the wet vote 2156.
The feature of the election was the result in Wadsworth, which, although it has six saloons, gave a dry majority of 67.

There are now 60 dry counties, 55 of them under county option and five under the local law. Nine counties have gone wet. Washington county will vote Friday and Holmes county Monday. There have been 1815 saloons voted out, besides a number of breweries. In the counties which have not been voted on there are 7145 saloons.

Delphos, Dec. 16—Joseph Reif, a special agent for Berghoff Brewing company of Fort Wayne, entertained the workers at the polls for the wet side in the late election of Allen county with a banquet at the Phelan hotel.

Canal Dover, Dec. 16—The New Philadelphia plant of the Stark-Tuscarawas Breweries company will close down indefinitely the latter part of this week. The Canal Dover plant was closed down and dismantled a year ago. The company will continue to operate its plants at Massillon and Canton. The local plant is closed down because of the local option, which becomes effective in Tuscarawas county today.

POLICE COURT

The McDonald-Matheny case has been wiped from the records in the mayor's court, when Matheny faced Mayor Atherton this morning and drew twenty days on the stone pile.
He was allowed nine days grace on the stone pile, owing to the fact that he has been in jail for the past nine days awaiting the result of McDonald's injury.

Some time ago Matheny hit Mc-Donald in the head with a brick, and the injured man was confined in the Sanitarium for some time threatened with concussion of the brain. His improvement was rapid and he is now able to be about. The story of the two men differed decidedly, Matheny, claiming that he didn't hit McDonald until after he had shot at him. Mc-Donald, in turn, claimed that after Matheny hit him then he cut loose with the gun.

Two Italians, claiming Newark as their home, were arrested in the B.

Detective Andrews. The men couldn't understand the questions the mayor of that city asked them, but they drew $6 and costs each, just the same.

Burl Wilson, from Alexandria, Ind., was arrested last night by Officer Swank at the Electric Light station, charged with being drunk. In court this morning Wilson said he was a glass worker and that he was on his way from Pennsylvania to his home.
Going for two days without sleeping was too much for him and he took several drinks, the result being that when he got in by the fire he "keeled over." He was a clean cut young fellow and after hearing his story he was released by the mayor.

BRONCHITIS VICTIM

Little Daughter of Mrs. Hastings of Fitchburg Suffered for Years—
Could Not Attend School
Winters.

COMPLETELY CURED BY VINOL.

"For many years my little daughter suffered from bronchitis. Every winter she was out of school more than she was in it, until at last I had to take her out of school entirely. We had one of the best doctors in the city, and while he would bring her out of the acute attacks all right, they kept occurring. At last she got so very bad that it did not seem as though she could stand any more spells. Knowing that Vinol had cured my little nephew of congestion of the lungs I decided to try it for my daughter. I did so, and could soon see a great difference. She took four bottles in all and it has completely cured her. That was a year ago and she has not had an attack of bronchitis since and seems strong and well." Mrs. J. E. Hastings, Fitchburg, Mass.

The reason Vinol is so successful in such cases is because it contains iron together with all of the healing, medicinal and body-building elements of cod liver oil actually taken from fresh cods livers—but no oil to upset the stomach and retard its work. It does not taste of oil and children love it.

If Vinol fails to benefit any case for which it is recommended, we will refund every cent paid us for it.
That's our guarantee; we know it will do you good. Frank D. Hall, Druggist, Newark.

The Licking County Teachers' Association will meet at the High school

teresting and helpful especially as

H. Snyder will be present and deliver several addresses. Every teacher is urged to be present at the opening hour, at 9 a. m. Following is the program:

"The Northwest Territory," Miss
Kate M. Litzburg, Utica.
"The Rural School," C. W. Swygart, Pataskala.

Deputy State School Commissioner.

tion.

St. Louis, Dec. 16—To prove air-

ZANESVILLE SALOONISTS

MUST CLOSE THEIR PLACES OF BUSINESS TONIGHT AT MIDNIGHT.

Untold Thousands Were Invested in Liquor in Muskingum Capital in Past Few Days.

Zanesville, Dec. 16—Thousands of dollars have been spent for liquor of all kinds in Zanesville in the past week or two, the trade prior to the permanent closing of the old-time saloons being enormous.

Evidence of the wholesale buying in the last two days have been numerous. Hundreds of men could be seen passing in and out of the saloons, all of them carrying packages. Some carried baskets, which were filled with bottles of liquors of various kinds.
All of the saloonists have practically disposed of all their stock.

Simon Lischer has arranged to continue his brewery as usual. He has decided to establish a distributing agency at Lancaster, in a wet county, for the purpose of sending his product to all parts of the state.

The appearance of Main street and several of the side streets in the business section will not be changed much as a result of local option, because the majority of the cafe owners on Main street will continue business, selling soft drinks and conducting lunch counters.

The time limit of 30 days expires tonight at midnight, and already about 20 of the saloonists, chiefly those on the outskirts, have quit business. The owners have been conducting raffish and bargain sales, and have depleted their stocks of whiskey, wines and liquors to a considerable extent.

THE BEACH HARGIS TRIAL.

Irvine, Ky., Dec. 16—The trial of Beach Hargis for the murder of his father, Judge Hargis, opened today.
Hundreds are flocking to town. The mother says she will spend her entire fortune to free her son. Young Hargis arrived in court early apparently unconcerned.

CLEAR THE COMPLEXION OVER NIGHT.

Pimples, Rash, Eruptions, Etc., Quickly Eradicated By New Skin Remedy.

Since its discovery, one year ago, poslam, the new skin remedy, has, in its extraordinary accomplishments, exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the eminent specialist who gave it to the world. It has cured thousands of cases of eczema and eradicated facial and other disfigurements of years' standing. The terrible itching attending eczema is stopped with the first application, giving proof of its curative properties at the very outset.

In less serious skin affections,
such as pimples, rash, herpes, blackheads, acne and barber's itch, etc., results show after an over night application, only a small quantity being required to effect a cure. Those who use poslam for these minor skin troubles can now avail themselves of the special 50-cent package, recently

Viewing Road.

The county commissioners went up to Johnstown Wednesday to view the Johnstown-Sunbury stone road, with a view to accepting the same from the contractors, Messrs. Wilson, Stasel & Wells. This road extends from the Delaware county line to Johnstown, a little over four miles, and is considered one of the finest pikes in the state.

Only One Saloon Has Discontinued.
Thus far the only person in Newark to close his saloon as a result of the recent local option election, and to get a refund from the County Auditor, is Mr. Howell Hildebrand, proprietor of the Jackson Hotel. Mr.
Hildebrand discontinued business on Tuesday, December 8, and was refunded $456.06 out of the $500 paid in. Several other proprietors of saloons have notified Auditor Wright of their intention to discontinue the business, but as yet have failed to report to him.

Second One to Close.

The second person to call on Auditor J. N. Wright for his refund on the saloon tax was Adam Bera, who conducted a saloon at the corner of Mohawk street and Wehrle avenue.
He discontinued business Wednesday, December 9, and was refunded the sum of $450.56.

Exceptions Sustained.

The exceptions filed by Criss Bros.
and George Bowers, undertakers, to the first and final account filed by Dr.
J. N. Stone, administrator of the estate of Mrs. Lavina Coffray, deceased, were heard in the Probate court Wednesday and the court sustained the exceptions.

Justice Nash's Court.

John Kennitzer was arrested
Tuesday night by Constable Brooke on a warrant issued by Justice M. O.
Nash. Kennitzer was jointly charged with Dick Paige and two other men, whose names are not known, with making a murderous assault on Alexander Ello, a foreigner. When Kennitzer appeared in court he presented a sorry spectacle. Nearly half of his face had been cut off and he was otherwise cut up. Ello says that Kennitzer, Paige and the other two men assaulted him and that he was compelled to use his knife in order to protect himself. In default of $200 bail Kennitzer was sent to the county jail to await his hearing which will be had before Justice Nash Thursday morning at 9 o'clock.

COMMON SENSE AND A TABLET

Do Away With Dyspepsia, Stomach Trouble and Make Meals
A Pleasure.

When your stomach goes on a strike and mass meetings of indigestion are held all over your body, then it is that you should sit up and take notice.

It is clearly and only a question of common sense—is this thing called dyspepsia. Take away, by abuse, over eating, excesses and high living,
the things which the stomach needs
and you have dyspepsia and indigestion; then other maladies follow these—this is common sense.

The stomach is willing enough but you won't let it do its work. You take away the materials which are so necessary for it to use.

Give back these materials and dyspepsia and indigestion flee and the whole machinery of man begins slowly to move and do its work.

What the stomach needs is nerve force, fluids for its digestive glands, nourishment and power. All these necessities it takes from the blood. If dyspepsia gives nothing to the blood,
the blood gives nothing to the stomach.

This is common sense also, pure,
simple and unalloyed.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are common sense pressed by high power into tablets. In these tablets are powerful essences which go into the stomach, digest food; stop gas making, prevent decaying of food, enrich the gastric juices, are absorbed by the blood and thus give it strength to furnish a better fluid for digesting the next meal. Every physician knows what comprises these tablets; every druggist has the same, knowledge also. They are natural common sense digesters which do the work for the stomach quickly and well. Every drug store carries them, 50c per package. Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free. Address F. A.

shall, Mich.

NEW YORK LAWYER WHO MAY ENTER TAFT CABINET

Washington, Dec. 16.—Politicians who profess to be familiar with Mr.
Taft's cabinet plans, expect John J.
McCook, a well known New York lawyer, to be offered a portfolio. It is believed that at least one and possibly two cabinet places will go to the Empire state and in that event Colonel McCook's friends regard his chances of a place as excellent. He belongs to the famous "Fighting Mc-Cook" family and earned his title through valiant service in the Civil war. President McKinley offered a cabinet place to Colonel McCook, but it was declined.

FOREST FIRES ARE RAGING

Oklahoma City, Dec. 16.—Forest fires are raging in the southeastern part of the state. Hundreds of men are fighting the flames. They threaten to reach into Texas and Arkansas.
Several houses were destroyed. The flames are still unchecked.

The Children Are Happy.

It is at this season that there are more happy people than at any other season of the year. Their little hearts beat much more rapidly than at any other time of the year, and all because of the near approach of Christmas and the annual visit of dear old Santa Claus. How much more the children of today receive on this occasion than did their pioneer ancestors. In the olden time if a lad or lassie received a lump of homemade taffy, a ginger cookie, and a 10 cent picturebook, they were happy. The child who received an orange was classed among the high and mighty.

Dog Had Rabies.

Tuesday morning John Spencer of Granville street, found his pet fox terrier suffering apparently from a bone in its throat. The boy made every effort to relieve the dog but failed, and after school in the afternoon he took the dog to Dr. Jones, veterinary surgeon, who immediately pronounced it a case of rabies. The disease was in an early stage, but the doctor says the symptoms were unmistakable. The dog had been about the house all day, but had developed no vicious tendency. The doctor, who put the animal out of its misery, says he knows of at least 50 cases of rabies among dogs of this vicinity within the past few months.

Fire in East End.

A telephone alarm sent in about 6:30 Tuesday night called the Central and East End companies to the two-story frame building formerly used as a broom factory, located between Cedar and Gay streets, and later used as a boys' club room. When the firemen arrived at the scene they found that part of the building used as a kitchen in flames. Several boys had been in the building during the afternoon and had started a fire in the kitchen stove, but as the fire had been allowed to die out during the afternoon, the origin of the fire is a mystery. The firemen quickly succeeded in getting the fire under control, but not before the small part of the house had been damaged. The building was owned by Mr. Selvester Beadie, and the loss will amount to about $250, on which there is an insurance to the amount of $100.

Injured in Runaway.

Rufus Whiting, a farmer living near Centerville, Knox county, met with a runaway accident on North Fourth street Wednesday afternoon, which resulted in his receiving several painful bruises. Whiting was driving a fractions mare coming into the city, when the steel became frightened at a pile of papers and began running and kicking. The animal succeeded in tearing the front of the buggy all to pieces, and, as it turned the corner of Fourth and Mott streets, overturned the buggy and threw the driver into the street. A sort distance down Mott street the rig became entangled in a fence and the horse was caught. Whiting's bruises were properly cared for and he brought the horse to a down town livery stable for keeping.

DANDRUFF

An Easy Task to Cure It When You Know How.

There are three kinds of dandruff cures:

Good dandruff cures.

Bad dandruff cures.

And plain liquid junk.

The first is good to put on the head; the second is good to keep off the head; and the third is good to flush out the sewer.

The owners of good dandruff cures say our remedy will cure you in two weeks or money back.

The owners of bad dandruff cures guarantee nothing, but spend their money howling fake at the good dandruff cures, which policy they consider is a clever method of enticing the shekels from the unwary.

Parisian Sage is a good dandruff cure.

It is guaranteed by T. J. Evans to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

It kills the dandruff microbes, it promotes a new growth of hair, it makes hair soft and luxuriant, and is without doubt the most pleasant and invigorating hair dressing made today.

To every reader of the Advocate, both man and woman, we want to say these few words:

If you have tried other dandruff cures, hair restorers, and have failed to receive any benefit from them, don't give up hope, try Parisian Sage at our risk.

Evans' Drug Store will sell you a large bottle for 50 cents with a money back guarantee if it does not do as advertised.

Orders shipped by express all charges prepaid, at regular price, by Giroux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Woman's World

ANTI-NOISE LEADER.

Even Paris Admires Mrs. Rice and Yields For Her Help.

Three years ago Mrs. Rice of New York city started an aggressive campaign to quell the excessive noises of urban life, and she is at present president of the association incorporated since then under the name of the Society For the Suppression of Excessive Noise. A tour of Europe has convinced her that in this matter, as in so many others, the people of America are far ahead of the rest of the world.

With the exception of a branch society in London, up to the time of the establishment of her society there was no association in existence with a similar object, so far as she could learn. People in Europe were interested in her work, and some of them, inclined to be critical at first, are now studying the subject with the intent of following her lead.

One of the most ardent admirers of her anti-noise campaign is the German writer, Professor Theodor Lessing, who has published a book entitled "Lärm" ("Noise"). He has shown his interest in a practical way and has established in Munich a similar society, which had its first meeting not long ago. He invited Mrs. Rice to become its president and was greatly disappointed that her work in New York will prevent her accepting.

The officials of the city of Rotterdam are discussing the establishment of a similar organization, and the newspapers devoted columns of description and praise to her work while she was there.

When Mrs. Rice reached Paris she found that the fame of the anti-noise society had long preceded her. Journalists visited her and were enthusiastic to the point of hysteria over her idea. One newspaper writer apostrophized her:

"When you have finished calming the American tumult come to us, come to Paris, for we have need of your aid. In Paris the tumult grows day by day. Come, oh, come! Try to obtain from our authorities permission to suppress, above everything else, the use of the strings of clanging bells which disgrace the necks of the cab horses. The sound of those bells is rendering us gradually foolish—idiots, neurotics. By and by we shall all be in asylums. Think of that, Mrs. Isaac L. Rice! Think of that and hurry up! We simply cannot wait, for it is absolutely true that if the present uproar continues much longer Paris itself will be only a great hospital!"

Mrs. Rice brought back in her trunk a few strings of the cab horse bells, which she rang as an accompaniment while she laughingly translated the appeal.

A Professor's Viewpoint.

The last contribution to woman vivisection is from Professor W. T. Thomas of Chicago university. In a number of the American Magazine the author of "Sex and Society," after giving an excellent resume of the evolution of the human animal from the standpoint of the biologist and the anthropologist, indulges, as is now customary, in the unmerciful and not uniformly logical dissecting of modern man's mate. Although a certain degree of scientific fairness is dealt her both in the author's premises and in his conclusion, and he at least concedes that woman is the same animal as man, he nevertheless deals with modern woman much after the manner of his predecessors.

For instance, he accuses her of cunning and hypocrisy (would not these qualities in man have become shrewdness and diplomacy?), of vanity applied to her wooing instincts, although he frankly admits that "she is less interested in man than man is in her." This, however, does not prevent his declaring that "her purity, constancy, reserve and devotion," which constitute "her morality," have been imposed upon her by man whom the latter pleases. Yet can it be denied that when woman breaks through her moral self restraint it is usually due to what the learned professor is pleased to call man's "interest in her"? Is he not a little "mixed" as to the quality and origin of woman's morality?

At least, unlike his predecessors, Professor Thomas seeks a remedy for the "irregularity, pettiness, ill health and unserviceableness of modern woman," and he finds it not only in a general and cultural education, but in "a special and occupational interest . . .

which should be preferably gainful." This, he thinks, would relieve the matrimonial situation by putting a curb on wives' demands upon their husbands' attentions and must provide a more solid basis of association by bringing women in the same general world of interest as men.

On this ground Professor Thomas, who, by the way, says many equally wise things and a few less so, will no doubt be met by most earnest modern women. The important point for the progress and happiness of society at the present juncture is that women and men shall stand together and understand each other, for, as the book of Genesis says, "God created man . . . and male and female he created them"—that is, they are one.

A Famous Physician's Advice.

There is a famous physician who has given much of his time to the study of rest. He has worked out some good plans for tired men and women which have benefited them.

This doctor says that plenty of fresh air day and night and one hour's walk is enough for any woman. Her constitution does not need any more exercise than is given by a three mile spin. If she is in the city she cannot go at such a rate of speed, but on springy country roads she can turn out from two to three miles a day and find herself in fit condition.

This is the only exercise, he thinks, that does not exhaust the heart, irritate the nerves and overwork the muscles. He does not object to light tennis, indifferently played, but tennis as the American girl plays it is simply out of the question. She wants to play like a man, and she plays against men. She plays too long, and the cold shower bath which she takes at the end is too serious a shock. This doctor has a good deal to say on the subject of annual vacations. He now has his hands full of sick and fatigued women who have overdone the vacation theory.

They work for ten months in a year in some way, whether for wages or not, without giving themselves any rest, then lump their rest all in a few weeks or less during the summer.

They do unaccustomed things which exhaust a body already tired and come back home generally unfit for the winter.

To quote him, he says: "Nine out of ten women feel worse after a vacation than when they started and are unable to resume work properly. A woman does not need a long rest, but a great number of short ones."

"It is better to rest four separate half hours a day than to go like mad through the week and rest sixteen hours on Sunday. It is better to divide the twelve months of work into stated half holidays rather than take two months after ten months of exhaustion."

Euchre Decorations.

Place a high glass vase with two or three long stemmed white roses in the center of your table. Around the base of the vase arrange the picture cards—borders, kings and queens—from a pack in a circle like a dolly.

The ices can be served in boxes simulating a pack of cards, and paper napkins on which cards are printed will add to the decorative scheme.

Make sandwiches and cakes in shape of hearts, diamonds, clubs and spades and have heart and diamond shaped dishes for bonbons and salted nuts.

As artificial light always adds a charm, exclude daylight, as your euchre is an afternoon affair, and light the room with candles. Get together as many candelabra and candlesticks as you can find places for putting them on sideboard, shelf, bracket—everywhere except on the table. They will give the room a soft, pretty light not attainable with gas or electricity.

At each cover place a playing card, face up, alternating the black and red suits. Duplicate these cards from another pack, and as the guests enter the dining room deal out one that corresponds to each place card, giving the women red and the men black, if men are present. In this way the guests will find their places at tables or partners with whom they are to converse. If refreshments are passed around, the table may be further decorated at each corner with a house of balanced cards, such as children delight in building, and any person unfortunate enough to knock one down must build it again for the amusement of all present.

For prizes the shops are showing chocolate jugs, water pitchers and candlesticks in a cream white porcelain decorated with playing cards. There are, too, little figures of the devil standing on a card that are very amusing and good for booby prizes.

Titled New Yorker Raises Poultry.

Poultry raising has become the chief diversion of Lady Craven, formerly Cornelia Martin of New York. It is fifteen years since the shy girl, then barely sixteen years old, faced a congregation of 2000 persons in Grace church and went to the altar as the bride of the weak looking young Englishman. There were many that day who predicted trouble for the child wife, but Lady Craven has been one American wife in Europe to find happiness. At the Craven estate, Combe abbey, in Warwickshire, she has one of the finest collection of hens, ducks, geese and turkeys in England. As a duck fancier she has taken many first prizes with her multicolored Mandarins, Carolinas and Bahamas. She also has won many firsts in the ornamental goose class with specimens of the gray geese, the white feathered Sebastopol and the barred Magellan. The proudest possession of Lady Craven's poultry yard, however, is the buff laced Wyandotte which she imported from this country. Lady Craven gives close personal attention to the care of her birds.

COLONEL SCOTT, U. S. A., AND MEN WHO FIGURE IN PROPOSED PROMOTION

Washington, Dec. 12.—It is believed at Washington that when President Roosevelt moves to promote Colonel Hugh L. Scott to be a brigadier general will revive the controversy that arose between General Leonard Wood and Captain L. M. Kohler of the Fourth cavalry in the Philippines. Colonel Scott preferred charges against Capt. Kohler, who is a brother-in-law of Representative D. R. Anthony of Kansas. Kohler was court martialized and acquitted, and Anthony now charges that General Wood suppressed a report calling for a court of inquiry following the court martial.

JACK'S FIRST CONCERT

By Lucille Baldwin Van Slyke.

Copyright 1908 by Rev. R. Hampton.

I JUST adore the violin," sighed Betty, swinging the shears recklessly as she cut a picture of Kubeik from a magazine.

"Say, my father, he's got a peach of a violin," said Jack eagerly.

"Can you play on it?" asked Betty.

"Well—some," faltered the boy. "You see I just got started on it while he and mom were away last summer. I found it in the safe that time he wrote me the combination to get his papers out for him. I didn't s'pose he'd care, but I—he—"

"He what?" asked Betty excitedly.

Jack's voice trembled with rage at the memory.

"Aw, he gave me the deuce for touching it. He thinks I'm just a kid."

"Is it a Stradivarius?" asked Betty.

"Naw, it's an old thing my grandfather had, but I fixed it up good. First off, I tried my mandolin strings, but they didn't work, so I blew myself to a full set of strings, an—well, then he came home."

Jack chewed vindictively at his apple core.

"I should think," pondered Betty reflectively, "that he'd like you to play it."

"Fathers make me dead tired," snorted Jack.

"Mine is simply noble," asserted Betty with dignity.

"Oh, it's different with girls; but, now, honest, Betty, he was dirt mean about it. And Ned Henson said he'd get me in his brother's orchestra if I'd learn."

"Really?" gasped the girl. "Why, Jacky—at those swell concerts they give, too?"

"Yep," said Jack, trying to be modest.

"Jack, could you get me and Nell an invite if you belonged?"

"Oh, I'll belong all right," he boasted. "I'm thinking about getting a violin any day now."

Betty held the picture at arm's length and eyed it rapturously.

"Isn't his hair grand and long?" she questioned musingly. "Say, you know my aunt, Madge Seymour? Well, she was introduced to him last winter and he shook hands with her. She let me see the gloves she had on that day. She isn't ever going to wear them again, and they're a perfectly new four-dollar pair, too."

"My hair's most as long as that when I'm playing football," observed Jack.

Betty sniffed.

"Football!" she scoffed. "Anybody can play football."

"Oh, can they?" taunted Jack. "Well, your own brother can't. He was the rottenest—"

"He was not!" snapped Betty. "And, anyway, my mother is glad he got out of the team; and it was just jealousy, he says, anyhow."

She resumed her study of the violinist's picture.

"Violins just make me cry," she confided. "My father took me to a concert in New York last winter and I—say, Jack, when you shut your eyes and listen your soul just floats and floats. Gee, I love it!"

Jack jammed his hands into his pockets.

"Why didn't you say so before?" he grumbled.

"I'd be playing for you every day by now. I like it myself, but nobody ever encourages me."

"Hum," said Betty scornfully. "encouragement isn't all there is to it. Fred knows a fellow over on the hill who got an awfully nice violin from his uncle for Christmas last year and his father paid eight dollars and fifty cents for some lessons and he can only play one scale and that sounds perfectly awful. He told Fred he was so he could swap it for something he liked."

"Where does that fellow live?" demanded Jack.

"In that ugly yellow house on Oxford Street—the one with the pink iron doors in front. 'Course he's quite young, even younger than Fred; but if he had any genius he could play. Kubeik did."

She returned to her dreamy study of the picture.

"He played simply elegant when he was six years old."

"Looks as if he were the same the rest," growled Jack.

"That's just too sweet!" insisted Betty quickly. "Anybody can wear stiff old things like you boys. I think it looks better than that silly thing you've got on."

Jack was late that night for dinner. He rushed madly to his room with a belly full of and tried to slide into his seat unnoticed. He was rubbing his hands on his napkin and trying to do his nails with a toothpick under the friendly shelter of the tablecloth when the inevitable question came.

"Nowhere," he announced, beginning his soup noisily. "Nowhere at all."

"You mean not anywhere?" roared Kate.

"I don't mean no," he countered. "Gee, you don't talk so grand if you fill 'em in English."

"Mrs. Perry said the girls could come over to play cards with a tennis," rejoined his sister, "but if you're going to act so grand you won't let us play."

"Don't want to," answered Jack promptly. "I'm too busy to fool around any time like that."

Waiting, whining sounds floated over the stairway a little later in the evening. Spot, dozing behind the sofa, lifted his head and howled. Mr. Richard's door opened and in.

"Who's making that infernal noise?" he demanded.

"We don't know," chorused the card players.

"Must be Jack," suggested Kate excitedly. "The way he's acting as if he'll call him?"

"What do you want?" yelled the delinquent from the land of nod. "I told you not to let him in here. I'm busy."

Derisive laughter greeted this remark, laughter that stopped abruptly as Mr. Richard called to his son.

"John, I should like you to come downstairs." Jack came, awkwardly holding a violin bow behind him.

"Were you making that strange noise?"

"Yes, I—"

"What have you in your hand?"

Jack held it out sulkily.

"Did I or did I not tell you last summer that you were to leave that violin alone?"

"Tisn't your violin," answered Jack with a curious little light of victory in his gray eyes. "It's my very own."

"Your own?" asked his bewildered father.

"Where did you get it?"

"Off a fellow over in Oxford Street."

"Indeed. Well, where did you get the money to buy it with?"

"Didn't have money. Just traded old truck for it."

"Well?" prompted his father.

"You said you were tired of their burrowing up the lawn," began the boy virtuously. "And it was a fierce job always feeding them and—"

"Whyee," protested the indignant Kate. "Jack Richard, you know those rabbits are half mine. You've got no right—"

"They are not," retorted Jack hotly. "You gave up your half in 'em for my letting you have all the tennis racket for yours."

"Children, don't wrangle," said Mr. Richard sharply. "Is that all you gave this youth for the fiddle, John?"

"Most all," stammered Jack. "Just some old stuff. I let him have my year-before-last skates—"

"I—I—w-w-w-want th-those sk-sk-skates," sobbed the "baby" suddenly. "You said you'd teach me on 'em when it was winter. You know you did."

"I did not," denied Jack. "I said if your feet got large enough, and they aren't! And I said if you stopped being such a cry baby and you're crying now this minute."

"That will do," interposed their father sternly. "You will all keep still while John answers me. Now, John, tell me exactly what you gave the boy for this violin."

"The rabbits an' th' old skates an' five of th' old phonograph records and my air rifle with the broken barrel and the old hose you threw away down to the stable and eight hundred and forty-two cigar coupons."

Mr. Richard's head went up in one of his rare noiseless laughs.

Jack grinned back happily.

"Honest, it's a terrible good violin, papa," he said. "Just take a look at the bow. It's an awfully good bow; it pulls just as easy! And the boy gave me a whole lot of rosin for nothing."

His father regarded the bow with a sigh.

"Run along," he said; "but for Heaven's sake go into the storeroom chamber. Spot and I can't stand that unearthly racket if it is a bargain."

Of course Jack had dimly realized for some years that true genius is never appreciated at the start, but the disloyalty of his immediate family was a great shock to him. He endured their taunts with remarkable fortitude, for he found a solace for all his boyish woes in the storeroom chamber. His mother, tender-hearted, came to the rescue at length with a most charming and surreptitious arrangement for some lessons with a young student.

"I do not approve of family secrets as a rule," she said, "but really, Jack, your father does not like to hear you play, and so if you will promise never to practise when he is in the house I will pay for the lessons."

To Betty he poured out his soul in these days. Never before had he felt he had any secure hold on that imperious little lady's affections; but in this she thoroughly sympathized with him. The day when Ned Henson's brother was prevailed upon to admit him to the sacred realms of the orchestra as a substitute member, he marched to the corner drug store and dropped a precious nickel in the telephone slot.

"Say, Betty," he confided rapturously, "guess what's happened? He's let me in! That is, 'most in. I can go to all the rehearsals, and I'm the second-violin substitute!"

"Do you think you'll get to be first before the concert?" came in happy tones over the wire.

"Well, not quite," he confessed; "but I might get to be the first-violin substitute or the really second violin. Say, I can't talk any more 'cause I'm in a drug store. I didn't call up at our house for fear the kids would hear everything."

The clandestine thrill that came over the wires was quite worth his extravagance.

"Nobody knows I'm talking to you either," giggled Betty. "I shut the hall door when you said it was you. I'm awfully proud of you. I bet everybody will be surprised to see what you can do."

"I guess they will," exclaimed Jack. "And look here, Betty, anyhow I can get you and Nell those tickets for the concert. They're going to have it in the Hensons' new barn this year and have Jap lanterns and lemonade and the Virginia reel and a whole slew of things doing."

The cruel interruption of Central and the lack of another nickel broke in upon the rapturous account of all these anticipated joys, but the boy rushed home to excited conferences with mother and still more faithful hopes of practice.

Rosy visions of his father on his knees begging his proud son to accept the family heirloom, exquisite thoughts of the time when he could play the now somewhat wobbly contrabass beneath Betty's window, and the more mysterious hopes of the store's stock as in such a Apollo Orchestra would accrue when the world appreciated them; all these things made the storeroom chamber a heavenly retreat.

During the anxious month before the concert the second violin fell obligingly ill with scarlet fever. After the first flush of joy Jack's conscience brought him with lagging feet to his mother's door.

"Course I didn't really pray about it," he confessed shyly; "or anything so bad as that; but I wished it so awful hard that something would happen to him, that I feel as if I'd made him sick."

After she comforted him he put his arms around her neck and wheedled. "There's one thing about it, but I'm most sure you can manage that. Fred's brother says I ought to wear long pants."

"Those boys are older than you dear," she objected.

"Not so very much," he insisted; "and anyway it would look pretty foolish if I didn't. Don't you suppose if you asked father real loving, and told him just how it was, and how I would be ever so careful of them and not wear them except for best and not tease to wear them to school—"

"My dear son," she smiled, "I have very little idea he would agree to any such proposition; you are not very large for your age and—"

"Aw, mamma," he burst out petulantly, "I'll bet he wore 'em when he was younger than me! He's just mean to me, he is! He don't never—er ever—"

"Mad?" questioned Jack tenderly. "I'd be the gladdest fellow!"

"Then turn your back again," she commanded.

"I—I—I well, I—am you sure you aren't going to be mad? I—I—I will get you some out of Cousin Jim's closet if you'll never go and tell on me and if you'll bring them right back. He left some when he went to military school. I saw them hanging on the line when Aunt Eleanor cleaned house last week."

"Bettina," he said solemnly, "I don't deserve such sacrifices as you and my mother make for me; but when I get older—if I ever do—He turned away speechless. In the light of this noble support he felt he could accomplish almost anything.

The afternoon before the concert he laboriously pressed them after he had smuggled the ironing board up to the storeroom chamber and silently stolen up and down three flights of stairs every time the iron grew cold.

He hurried through his dinner with smiling glances at his mother from time to time. One of these happy grins was interrupted by a stern remark from his father.

"John, didn't I give you a quarter last Friday to have your hair cut?"

"I've got it in my pocket," faltered Jack. "I didn't just get time yet."

"Your hair looks like a Fiji Islander's," said Mr. Richard. "I don't want to speak about its

"John Forbes Richard," said his mother sternly, "do you think I am going to sit here and listen to your abuse of your father and then go and ask him a very great favor for you?"

"Please ask him!" pleaded the boy. "Please do and I'll be so good—I'll be good always!"

But even managed with his mother's most exquisite tact the interview with Mr. Richard was unsuccessful, and poor Jack spent another week in despair. He was obliged at length to confess this new sorrow to Betty. She sympathized and pondered over the problem. Suddenly she flashed and began to stammer in the midst of her regrets.

"Jack," she faltered nervously, "I'm going to do a perfectly dreadful thing. Probably you'll think I'm perfectly terrible, but I—"

He found himself listening painfully at her noisy distress and he walked to the other end of the room.

"If it's anything you've got to tell me, don't you don't like to," he said calmly, "I'll tell you back while you say it. You can't tell me anything free to tell me from anything. I'll tell you about my pants," he ended.

"It's about shoes," murmured Betty.

"I won't get mad if I tell you a private thing about you?"

"Well, just this once," he conceded.

As Jack plunged joyously upstairs to dress it seemed to him his life had never been so full of bliss. When he was nearly dressed he tiptoed to his small brother's room and came back with that youngster's Sunday tie. As he dreamily adjusted the Windsor before his mirror he smiled. He rummaged in the bureau a moment more and brought out the counterpart of Betty's picture of the violinist.

He patted his hair anxiously into place with his fingers on the picture. "It's most as long," he murmured, as he reached under his bed for his violin case and drew out the instrument to try the dramatic effect.

He groped in vain for the bow. In its accustomed place he found a slender stick from Kate's fish-pond game. A scrap of paper dangled from its foolish little tin hook. The paper, uncrumpled, revealed this cruel bit of verse:

Smartie, smartie,
Went to a party.
Didn't get his sister asked to it.
He asked some girls
With dark brown curls,
But when he got there he had a fit.
Go play with this on your old fiddle.
Then I just guess those girls will giggle.

He paled with rage at this dastardly blow. He did not dare go into the library in his borrowed clothes. There was no time to dress again; the minutes were already ticking ominously away. He knew now why that fiendish Kate had settled herself under her father's lamp with her algebra. He turned her room topsy-turvy in a vain search. Finally he stole in despair to his mother's sitting-room in hopes she could help him. But she, too, was downstairs.

In the alcove back of her sewing screen was his grandfather's huge old safe. Jack paused. Could he remember the combination? He tried it gently, fumbling in the dim light. He flushed with joy as the door swung slowly open.

"I'll just take it for to-night," he murmured. "I'm sure my own grandfather wouldn't care if I borrowed his bow. I'll bet he'd be glad to have me do it."

He sighed as he touched the familiar instrument, still bearing the strings he had put upon it last summer.

"Mine squeaks so fierce," he thought regretfully. He shut the door of the safe hurriedly a few seconds later as he heard some one coming up the stairs. When he rushed out of the house his guilty little heart was beating wildly.

Betty and Nell greeted his late arrival with many exciting comments, but he rushed them along.

"Were they all right?" whispered Betty meaningly. "I was scared stiff for fear they weren't."

"They're fine," he whispered back politely. "Your cousin has fine taste even if he is just a little taller than me."

"Then why didn't you hurry?" she grumbled. "You know it begins at half past seven and you know I have to be home by ten."

The concert was a great success. The lanterns gleamed softly in the evergreens and bunting. The musician's platform very obligingly held together until the last number. Everybody had a beautiful laugh when it did fall, and the most blissful of all the orchestra's own meager refreshments—of lemonade and popcorn was generously augmented by an unlimited supply of pink ice cream from Ned Henson's wonderful mother.

But in spite of all these joys, in spite of Betty's smiles, in spite even of the exquisitely funny remarks of his male friends about his having "pantaloons to rent," Jack's face was pitifully sober at times. After he and Ned had escorted his small charges home he hung reluctantly at the corner.

"Say, Ned," he said, interrupting the other's bubbling reminiscence of the evening, "I guess I'll cart my truck home and come over some other night."

"You will not," asserted Ned promptly. "He'll never say you can again for a year, and you know it. Besides," he added temptingly, "I thought up a bully joke for us to play on Jim, and anyhow you haven't got a key."

"I suppose they wouldn't expect me," agreed Jack, hesitatingly.

In the morning he insisted on going home before breakfast. His awkward thanks to his hostess and his evident haste were a rather dubious compliment to the Henson hospitality.

The family were not at breakfast when he reached home; they were all talking excitedly in the upstairs sitting room. Through the doorway he caught a glimpse of a policeman and an open safe. He remembered with awful distinctness that he had not locked the safe when he shut it.

He fled wildly to the storeroom chamber and sat down in a miserable heap. Twice he opened the door and tried to go downstairs; twice he shut it quickly in his fright. It seemed to him, he could never face his father. At last he crawled slowly downstairs. They were all in the library now; he could hear his father's voice distinctly.

"The silver they dropped when I gave the alarm. Mrs. Richard's jewelry was in another part of the house so they overlooked that. All they really have is a little money, some of the children's trinkets, and the violin. But as I said before, that is a serious loss. It is not only an expensive old one, but it belonged to my father and I value it highly on that account."

Jack's heart gave a mighty thump and he rushed headlong into the room.

"They didn't get it! They didn't get it!" he cried shrilly. "They just got my rinky, dinky old fiddle!"

Jack's heart gave a mighty thump and he rushed headlong into the room.

"They didn't get it! They didn't get it!" he cried shrilly. "They just got my rinky, dinky old fiddle!"

His amazed audience listened eagerly to his somewhat incoherent explanations.

"Kate took my bow, so I had to have one. And while I was getting it the violin looked so much nicer I—I had to take it. I was going to put it straight back this morning but I'm afraid I—I left the door open," he finished bravely; "so everything else is my fault."

When the others were gone they faced each other.

"You can whip me even if I am big," stammered the boy. "I know I serve it, papa."

His father picked up the violin and looked at it for a long time before he spoke.

"John," he said finally, "your grandfather and I quarreled bitterly about this violin once. He wanted me to play on it and I didn't want to."

Jack stared.

"And then," said his father quietly, "he died just after that."

Jack looked miserably at the floor.

"So that is why I felt I could hardly give it to a little boy for a plaything. Do you think you understand?"

Another long silence. Jack kept on staring stupidly at the rug. Finally he looked up shyly. His father was holding out the violin to him.

"Will you always be careful of it?" he asked softly.

The choking in Jack's throat grew intolerable. Suddenly he flung himself at his father.

"Give me a bear hug again," he snuffled. "Just one 'fore I get too old! We—we—we w-w-won't ever quarrel again w-w-w again!"

AMUSEMENTS

THE TIME, THE PLACE AND THE GIRL TONIGHT
The attraction which holds the boards at the Auditorium theatre to-night will undoubtedly receive a good patronage, and if all reports are true, those who witness the performance will not regret it. This piece has been given more or less publicly in Newark because of its catchy music. Reviewers representing city papers of reputation have written that the music is not the whole show by a great deal. Montgomery Fester, the well known critic of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, devoted half a column to praising the company which appears here, while "Hope," whose judgment is always respected by the readers of the Cleveland Leader, is likewise lavish in his praise of the production itself, its staging, and the performers appearing in it.

THE PRESS AGENT SAYS:
"The Girl Question" and "A Stubborn Cinderella" are numbered among the present season's musical bookings of the Auditorium theatre.

"A Marriage for Money" has a title that is expressive of the import of the play, but is deceptive in that you might think it a blood-spilling melodrama. That isn't the case at all. "A Marriage for Money" is a present day drama of high life, dealing with just what the title suggests. The characters might be recognized as true representations of certain characters in the public gaze today. The story is intense in its simplicity and will not be disappointing to the lovers of a refined production by a clever cast. This attraction will appear at the Auditorium theatre next Friday night.

"The Cow-Puncher" which opens at the Auditorium theatre on Saturday, December 19th for matinee and night is not only one of the finest scenic productions on the road, but has the largest piece of scenery ever seen on a local stage. There is a cyclorama drop 110 feet long and 30 feet high, which encircles the entire stage, excepting the opening at the foot-lights. All the balance of the scenery sets inside of this gigantic drop. It shows the cactus covered plains and the Santa Cruz river majestically winding its way along the base of the famous Santa Cruz Mountains. Inside of this gorgeous cyclorama sets the ranch abode house, with high stone walls, and in the distance stands the cattle corrals. Together with its great company of players and the electrical effects, this play stands one of the hits of the season. Watch for the man with the ropes.

For the last three days of the at the Orpheum, Manager Moore announces the following bill: Lester and Mildred, singers, dancers and whistlers; Kipp and Kippy, comedy jugglers; Thomas Carry, "The Man with the Big Banjo," and Hickman, Willis and company in a comedy playlet. Manager Moore says the bill is equal to that of the first half of the week, and that is sufficient recommendation. Tonight will be the last opportunity to see one of the best bills of the season.

A FORMER NEWARKITE.
Clay T. Vance, the producer and general manager of "Married For Money," which comes to the Auditorium theatre next Friday evening, is an old Newark boy who will doubtless be remembered by many Newark citizens. Mr. Vance is quite deeply interested in the theatrical business, being the promoter of a number of popular price successes. He embarked in the theatrical business several years ago, and has been decidedly successful in his exploitation of the various attractions which he controls. Elmer Vance, a brother, and also a former Newark man, is likewise a successful producer.

THE WET AND DRY CIRCUIT

Chillicothe Wants to Break into the Local Option League in the Season of 1909.

Chillicothe wants to land in the Ohio State league next season, and some of the progressive spirits of the town have written President Bob Quinn stating their desires along this line. It will be remembered by the fans, that at the time of the blow-up at Springfield that a strong bid was made by the business and professional men of Chillicothe who wished to be represented in the new league.

However, Eddie Ransick, at that time manager of the team, saw an opportunity to land in Portsmouth, and he snapped at the chance. As it proved out later, Portsmouth was a mighty good berth for the storm battered warriors and the city of Portsmouth proved a winner from a baseball standpoint. Saddled by a losing team the fans came nobly to the support of their team, and with an aggregation, that was making a good fight the river town should prove a good home.

Since the talk has gone out that the Ohio State league may be increased to eight towns in 1909, the fans of Ohio's old capital have again the fever in its worst form. In reply to the letter addressed to him, President Bobby Quinn replied that in his opinion Chillicothe might make a good ball town. There has been no baseball there for years, and with a good start great interest might be awakened.

Quinn advised the writer for information to inquire about a lease on a suitable grounds, and he also suggested that the business and professional men of the town be sounded to see if they would rally to the support of a team in their city. It was also suggested by the president that the information be obtained by the last Monday in December, when the directors of the league will meet.

Since the season closed a peculiar proposition has presented itself to the different clubs, for some will retain the same support they have had in seasons past, while others will have to look for help from a different quarter. Newark, Portsmouth and Marion are now dry, while Lancaster, Mansfield and Lima are wet towns. In former years the wet interests, the breweries and saloons were strong supporters of the teams in the first three cities, and this year that support will be taken from them.

Just what effect this will have on baseball is hard to say, but there is no doubt but what it will be a "facer" for the directors, and the business men will have to come to the front more liberally than ever if baseball in those towns will be "sure enough" go this coming season. Marion, Newark and Portsmouth, now the dry end of the circuit, were considered good ball towns, and for that reason it is practically impossible to say just now what the result will be in the baseball line in 1909.

Newark, without baseball in the summer, would be a mighty dead burg, and should there be no team here next year the town would receive a black eye that would be hard to recover from. In seasons past the city has been considered "one of the best little towns in Ohio," and it received publicity from its able team that it wouldn't get in any other way. Now it seems to be a question as to what's doing along this line, but just at present the directors are not saying a word.

There is an instance of a craftiness combined with a real feeling toward progress. A mining expert in Philadelphia, who had assayed a lot of copper bearing rock said to have come from Haiti, went down there to look over the ground. He found a fine ore mountain, but it was far in the interior and quite inaccessible for business purposes unless a railroad could be built. The Germans had a railroad from Port au Prince to the salt lakes and naturally wanted no competition, and a German steamship line saw possible rival steamships connecting with the rail end. They began to work on the president.

ALEXIS NO GRAFTER.

Even the Haitian Ex-President's Foes Admit He Is Honest.

RULED WITH AN IRON ROD.

Represents In Himself Chief Racial Traits of Haitians—An Instance of His Craftiness Combined With a Real Feeling Toward Progress—Believer In Voodooism.

General Nord Alexis, the deposed president of Haiti, being a product of a turbulent country with frequent revolutions, a steady stream of political assassinations and a perfect sea of corruption and intrigue, represented in himself the principal characteristics of the Haitian people. He climbed to the presidency by force. He is half savage, but even his enemies admit that he is patriotic and honest, exceptionally so, according to Haitian standards, says the New York Herald. He always posed as the opponent of graft, and by this he is distinguished from most of the Haitian leaders who assailed him all the time he was in power.

There has been much speculation about the age of Alexis. It has been placed between eighty-five and 100. According to a biography published in Haiti, he was born in 1820. His father was a so-called prince of Cape Haitien, the northernmost part of the country. The parent held a high position in the household of Emperor Henry Christophe, a barbarian, who left behind him when he committed suicide in 1820 a long trail of political crimes.

General Alexis in 1896 rebelled against Hippolyte, who previously had overthrown President Legitime. Hippolyte died in a fit of rage the same year while preparing to march against the rebels, and he was succeeded by General Sam in March, 1896. When that leader fled from the country after the people had risen against him in 1902 General Alexis, who had been the most formidable spirit in the revolution, assumed the presidency. He plunged at once into a reorganization of the departments of the government. His policy was to remove as far as possible French and German influence from the affairs of state in their bearing upon the finances and development of the country.

Alexis pursued his enemies without mercy, and finally last March twenty-seven alleged conspirators against his government were slaughtered, and international attention was directed to Haiti by political refugees seeking asylum in the French and other legations.

It is said to have been Alexis' ambition to proclaim himself emperor of Haiti. Whether this be true or not, he surrounded himself with considerable military panoply of a character which would excite the ridicule of an American, but which nevertheless was taken very seriously in Haiti. The president's mansion was strongly guarded. Soldiers were stationed inside and outside the compound around the mansion. Within the building there was usually a picturesque display of officers, most of whom were uniformed brilliantly, but in various styles and colors. No two officers appeared to be dressed alike.

There is no reason to believe that General Alexis has done anything in six years of rule with an idea less commendable than the improvement of his country and its standing with the rest of the world. He was firm in the persuasion that the proximity of white people was, on the whole, dangerous to the independence of the country, and, although he did nothing on the offensive, he was ever careful of granting trade concessions.

Here is an instance of a craftiness combined with a real feeling toward progress. A mining expert in Philadelphia, who had assayed a lot of copper bearing rock said to have come from Haiti, went down there to look over the ground. He found a fine ore mountain, but it was far in the interior and quite inaccessible for business purposes unless a railroad could be built. The Germans had a railroad from Port au Prince to the salt lakes and naturally wanted no competition, and a German steamship line saw possible rival steamships connecting with the rail end. They began to work on the president.

Alexis took his particular view of the case. "I don't mind giving you a concession," he said, "but I don't want to run the chance of giving you the whole island." He had evidently heard something of concessions.

The Germans spent a good deal of money in Haiti over this matter, it is reported, but finally Nord Alexis, after an interview in which he showed a keen business sense, though asking nothing for himself, granted the concession. He signed the papers and sent them to congress. The gentlemen in the legislature, however, had been "seen," and though they did not care to involve themselves with the president, they delayed and delayed until they found a way out. Enough of them to break the quorum left the capital and went down the coast. Nord Alexis merely sent his gunboat after them, with a courteous request to come back. They came back. They knew Nord Alexis.

In appearance General Nord Alexis is at least very striking. Forty years ago he must have been a mighty warrior, over six feet in height and powerful in build. His features are those of a central African, his color coal black.

Nord Alexis has been frequently described as a believer in voodooism. His wife died a few weeks ago.
